Love, Loss, and Longing: Creating a Circle of Sisterhood to Navigate Our Migratory Grief

María José Yax-Fraser

María José Yax-Fraser is an Indigenous Mayan woman in the diaspora, a feminist artivist, academic and community research practitioner, and mother of three children.

Combining her artivism and ethnographic research practice, she coordinates and documents the Circle of Sisterhood project offered by the Local Council of Women to migrant women experiencing migratory grief.

She has worked in settlement and (forced) migration for 30 years. She co-founded the Immigrant Migrant Women's Association of Halifax (IMWAH) and actively advocates for gender equality, equity and the advancement of women, and promotes human rights, affordable housing, women's wellness, and the eradication of gender-based violence.
